DALLAS – Bracewell LLP announced today that Peter W. Rogers has joined the firm's tax department as a partner in the Dallas office. Rogers comes to Bracewell from Vinson & Elkins LLP. Prior to his tenure at Vinson & Elkins LLP, Rogers practiced law at Cravath, Swaine & Moore LLP for seven years.

"Peter is a terrific tax lawyer with a broad range of transactional experience, particularly in the energy sector," said Bracewell Managing Partner Gregory M. Bopp. "We're delighted to welcome him to the firm and our market-leading tax practice."

Rogers advises clients on tax strategies for complex corporate transactions, including mergers and acquisitions, spin-offs, reorganizations, joint ventures, renewable energy investments, securities offerings and bank financings. He has experience across a range of industries, including energy, infrastructure, finance, technology, media and entertainment, consumer products and telecommunications. Prior to his legal career, Rogers was a senior associate at PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP in New York.

"Peter is a well-rounded tax lawyer with experience in mergers, acquisitions, joint ventures and financing transactions, including in the conventional energy and energy transition industries, and adds valuable breadth and depth to our tax team," said Elizabeth L. McGinley, head of Bracewell's tax department and chair of the firm's energy transition practice.

Bracewell's tax department is nationally recognized for its experience involving tax matters related to the energy industry and has spearheaded the development of one of the country's largest multi-disciplinary legal teams focused on the energy transition. The firm has a growing bench of tax lawyers
