

EPA Air Office Restructuring May ‘Disrupt’ Ambitious Deregulatory Push

Media Mentions

May 20, 2025 | Inside EPA | 1 minute read | Washington, DC

Former Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) officials are warning that the timing of the Office of Air and Radiation’s (OAR) reorganization will be “disruptive” and might undermine the Trump administration’s aggressive push to rescind a suite of Biden-era rules this year.

Speaking to Inside EPA, Bracewell’s Jeff Holmstead, who ran OAR during the George W. Bush administration, said that there is “a real tension between meaningful regulatory reform and dramatically reducing the size of the agency.” Holmstead noted that the success of the effort “won’t be known for another six to eight months when we see proposals.”

Related People

Jeffrey R. Holmstead

Partner

WASHINGTON, DC

+1.202.828.5852

jeff.holmstead@bracewell.com

Related Industries

Energy

Related Practices

Environmental Litigation &

Enforcement Defense

Environmental Permitting &

Regulation

Energy Regulatory

Energy Regulatory Compliance &

Enforcement