

Is the UAE Likely to Introduce Corporate Taxes?

Media Mentions

July 21, 2020 | Middle East and Africa | 1 minute read | Dubai

Bracewell's Chris Williams recently discussed with ALM's Middle East and Africa reporter Peter Shaw-Smith whether or not the business-friendly United Arab Emirates will introduce a corporate tax.

Williams said that the hotly debated issue “does come up for discussion on a pretty regular basis, as does [the question] of income tax.”

“The general consensus is that it will be far easier and far more straightforward to introduce corporation tax than it would be to introduce income tax, for a multitude of reasons,” said Williams. “However, there are some obviously significant hurdles regarding the corporation tax idea.”

Click here to read more from Middle East and Africa.

Related People

Christopher R. Williams

Managing Partner – Dubai

DUBAI

+971.4.350.6807

chris.williams@bracewell.com

Related Industries

Finance

Related Practices

Corporate & Securities

Tax