Marie Zelazko has over 18 years of experience advising on complex and innovative debt finance transactions, with a particular focus on energy-related projects in France and French-speaking Africa. She regularly advises developers, industrial sponsors, investment funds, and financial institutions on the structuring and negotiation of sophisticated financing arrangements. Her deep knowledge of OHADA law, as well as UEMOA and CEMAC regulations, makes her a trusted advisor for cross-border transactions in West and Central Africa.

Before joining Bracewell, Marie practiced at several leading international law firms, where she built a strong track record of delivering strategic and commercially sound advice on landmark deals across the energy and infrastructure sectors.
